Commiſſion ſigned by His Majeſty for the Army in Ireland.

64*th Regiment of Foot*, John Strode Boiſdaune to be Enſign, vice ——— Johns, promoted. Dated July 31, 1789.

Madrid, September 28.

On the 21ſt Inſtant, being the Day appointed for the Ceremony of the King of Spain's Coronation, or, as it is here termed, his Public Entry, their Catholick Majeſties, together with all the Royal Family of Spain, in different State Coaches, preceded by the Three Companies of Life Guards, and the Great Officers of State, and followed by the Attendants in Waiting of each Individual of the Royal Family, in different State Carriages, forming altogether a moſt numerous, ſplendid and magnificent Proceſſion, left the Palace about Six o'Clock in the Evening, and proceeded through ſome of the principal Streets of this City, to the Church of St. Mary, where Te Deum was ſung; and from thence their Majeſties returned, in the Manner, through other Streets, to the Palace. The Streets through which the Proceſſion paſſed were lined with the Foot Guards and the other Troops in Garriſon here, and Orders had been previouſly given for all the Houſes to be decorated and illuminated in the beſt Manner poſſible on that and the Two following Days.

On the 22d in the Afternoon their Majeſties and the Royal Family went in the ſame State to the Plaza Mayor, or principal Square in the City, to ſee the Royal Bull-feaſt. On ſuch Occaſions it has been the ancient Cuſtom for the Bulls to be fought by Noblemen, or Gentlemen of diſtinguiſhed Birth: On the preſent, Four Gentlemen entered the Liſts, and fought the Six firſt Bulls on Horſeback; they have been rewarded in the uſual Manner with a Penſion, and with the Rank of Caballerizo de Campo, or Equerry to the King. The reſt of the Bulls were fought by the moſt famous Bull-fighters that could be collected from every Part of the Kingdom. The Balconies of the firſt, ſecond, and third Stories of the Houſes in the Square were appropriated to the Reception of the Great Officers of State and their Ladies, of both the Male and Female Part of the Royal Houſehold, the Members of the Council of Caſtile, thoſe of the other Supreme Councils of the Kingdom, and of the Heads of many other Departments of the State, who all attended, with their Ladies, in Court Dreſſes. The Ambaſſadors and other Foreign Miniſters were invited to the Feaſt, and a Balcony was allotted to each: The Ambaſſadors had their Seats on the firſt Story, and the Miniſters of the Second Order and the Chargés d'Affaires on the Second. By the moſt exact Computation of the Number of Spectators in the Square, they amounted to about Forty-five Thouſand.

On the 23d their Majeſties and the Royal Family went early in the Morning, in private, to the Old Palace of the Buen Retiro, to which the Church of St. Jerome joins. At Nine o'Clock the King and Queen, with the Prince of Aſturias and the Infant Don Antonio, entered the Church. Their Majeſties took their Seats on a Throne to the right of the high Altar, and the Prince of Aſturias and the Infant Don Antonio on Chairs to the left of the Throne, oppoſite to which was ſeated the Cardinal Patriarch of the Indies, and next to his Eminence Thirteen Archbiſhops and Biſhops on a Bench. The remaining Space of the Platform raiſed before the high Altar was occupied by the great Officers of State and of the Houſehold: At the Entrance of it ſtood Four Heralds at Arms, and on the Steps Four Mace Bearers with the Royal Maces. In the Body of the Church were ſeated, according to their Rank, a certain Number of the Grandees of Spain, of the Titulos of Caſtile, and the Procuradores de Cortes, or Repreſentatives of thoſe Cities and Towns who have the Right of Vote in the Cortes of the Nation. After the Maſs was ended, at which the Cardinal Archbiſhop of Toledo officiated, his Eminence took his Seat at the Foot of the high Altar, and before him was placed a Table, with the Book of the Goſpel open, and a Golden Croſs on it. The ſenior Herald at Arms then read the Proclamation for the Oath of Allegiance, which which was afterwards repeated by the ſenior Law Officer. This Oath declares Allegiance to the King of Spain, and to the Prince of Aſturias, acknowledging his Royal Highneſs to be the Prince of this Realm during his Majeſty's Life, and to be the lawful King, Lord and Heir of the Dominions of Spain at his Majeſty's Death. After the Oath was read, the Infant Don Antonio moved from his Seat, and knelt before the Cardinal Archbiſhop to ſwear to the Obſervance of it. His Royal Highneſs then did Homage to the King, and after embracing his Majeſty and the Queen, and the Prince of Aſturias, returned to his Seat. The Mayordomo Mayor, or Lord Steward of the Houſehold, was then appointed by the King to receive the Homage of all thoſe who were preſent. The Cardinal Patriarch roſe firſt, who, having ſworn before the Archbiſhop and the Mayordomo Mayor, kiſſed their Majeſties and the Prince of Aſturias' Hands. The ſame Ceremony was ſucceſſively obſerved, firſt by the Prelates, next by the Grandees, after them by the Titulos, and laſtly by the Procuradores de Cortes. The Patriarch then took the Archbiſhop's Place, in order to adminiſter the Oath to the latter, and the Ceremony concluded with ſinging Te Deum. The Diplomatic Body were invited to ſee this ſolemn Act, and a Gallery oppoſite to the Throne was allotted for their Reception. Their Majeſties and the Royal Family dined at the Buen Retiro, and late in the Evening returned in State to the Palace.

The Decorations and Illuminations of ſome of the Houſes of the Grandees and others of the Nobility, which happened to be ſituated in the Streets through which the Proceſſion paſſed on the three before mentioned Days, were very ſplendid and coſtly; and thoſe of the Paza Mayor, and of the great Square before the Palace, were executed with the utmoſt Magnificence.

His Catholick Majeſty on this Occaſion has made a general Promotion in his Navy and Army, and the Coronation has been, and continues to be, celebrated by Balls and Feſtivals of different Kinds.

On Wedneſday laſt an Officer arrived from the combined Army, under the Command of the Prince of Saxe-Cobourg and General Suwarow, with the News of a ſignal Victory obtained over the Army of the Grand Vizir, on the 22d of September, near Martineſtie, in Wallachia, when the Turkiſh Army, conſiſting of between Ninety and a Hundred Thouſand Men, was entirely defeated, after an obſtinate Engagement.
